THE CUSTER MASSACRE

Statement of a Trapper who was an Eye-Witness—Six Prisoners Burned at the Stake and Horribly Tortured.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 7—The [illegible] Press and Tribune will to-morrow publish an interview with an old trapper named Ridgley, who has been a long time in the Yellowstone country and claims to have witnessed Custer's massacre, being a prisoner in Sitting Bull's camp and seeing every movement of the troops. He was taken prisoner last March and kept in the camp of the Indians ever since. Until the Custer massacre he was treated kindly. He says Sitting Bull organized not to fight the whites but to drive the miners from the Black Hills. Previous to Custer's attack mounted couriers from Sitting Bull's camp had for eight days watched his forces, their division into small detachments being noted with manifestations of extreme delight. Ambuscades were immediately prepared, and while the Indians stood ready for attack many of them clambered on the side hills overlooking Custer's line of march. The Indian camp was divided by a bluff, the point of which ran toward the Rosebud and in the direction of one of the available fords on the river. To reach their camp by this ford Custer followed their trail down to the water's edge. There were but 2 tepees visible to Custer, but there were 75 double tepees behind the bluffs not visible. Custer attacked the small village and was immediately met by 1,500 or 2,000 Indians in regular order of battle. Every movement was made with military precision. Ridgley says he stood on the side hill, where he had a complete view of the battle, which was not more than 1½ miles distant. Custer began the fight in a ravine near the ford, and fully half his command seemed to be unhorsed at the first fire. Then the soldiers retreated toward the hill in the rear, where they were shot down on the way with astonishing rapidity, the commanding officer falling from his horse in the middle of the engagement, which commenced at 11 A M and did not last over 45 minutes. After the massacre of Custer's force the Indians returned to camp with six soldiers as prisoners, and delirious with joy over their success. These six men were tied to stakes at a wood pile in the village and all burned to death. While the flames were torturing them to death the Indian boys fired red hot arrows into their quivering flesh until they were dead. Sitting Bull was met after the fight, and he exultantly remarked that he had killed many soldiers and one damned General, but did not know who he was. The squaws then armed themselves with knives, visited the battle field and robbed and mutilated the bodies of the soldiers. While the six soldiers were being burned, the Indians turned their attention to the force—evidently Reno's—attacking the lower end of the village. Ridgley says Custer's command had been slaughtered before a shot was fired, Reno's force attacking the lower end of the camp at about 2 P M. The Indians returned in the evening and said the men had fought like the devil, but Ridgley says they didn't make any statement of their losses. They said the soldiers had been driven back twice, and they piled up stones and the attack was unsuccessful. The prisoners were kept burning over an hour, but Ridgley was not permitted to speak to them, so he is unable to state who they were. One was noticeable for his small size and gray hair and whiskers. Reno killed more Indians than Custer, who fell in the midst of the fight, and two captains, believed to be Gates and Keogh, were left to die. The night after the massacre the Indians were wild with delight; many got drunk on whisky stolen from the whites, and the squaws performed the duty of guards for the prisoners. The squaws becoming drowsy, Ridgley and two companions escaped, securing ponies, and began a long journey homeward. The party ate game and lay in the woods four days to avoid the Indians. On the way Ridgley's horse stumbled, breaking his arm, but the party finally reached Fort Abercrombie, and thence Ridgley came here.

He describes Sitting Bull as a half breed, of large size, very intelligent, with a peculiar gait.

A NEW YORK OPINION OF TILDEN

The New York Herald is to New York what the Times is to London—it reflects the every day opinions of the people. This is what it says about Gov. Tilden in connection with the State convention:

The difficulty with Governor Tilden, however, is that he is too astute. In this respect our honored fellow citizen reminds us of Buchanan. He has spent so many years in finesse, wire working and intrigue in making and unmaking combinations that the habit has become a second nature. It was said of the late Emperor Napoleon that studying his character was like opening one door and closing another—going from chamber to chamber and never coming to an end. Governor Tilden is open to the same criticism. We see one door open to-day and another to-morrow. To-day we are told he means Dorsheimer; to-morrow, Hewitt; the third day Marble. We have no doubt that Hewitt, Marble and Dorsheimer all rest content, confident in their heart of hearts that each is the chosen armor bearer. It is just as probable, and we should not be surprised at all if we so learn in time—that Gov. Tilden has in reserve a surprise of his own—a great unknown, a 'dark horse,' some animal or spectre that he has kept hidden to present to a surprised convention just as he presented Bigelow, Fairchild and other pet candidates who were believed to be Republicans until he vouched for them as Democrats. It would not at all surprise us therefore to see the facility and fondness for surprises and stage effects which have marked the whole political life of Governor Tilden suddenly flare into new life in this question of the Governorship.

That Mr Tilden was a dark horse to Gov. Seymour is now well known to every one.

The Herald continues: If by reason of what he has said or refused to say, by reason of what he has hinted or his friends have hinted in his name, he gives out that he supports two or three candidates at the same time, some one must be cheated. When a politician descends to refining and finessing, to the suggesting of one policy when he means another, to playing off friend against friend as a temporary expedient, the result must in the end be disastrous.

BOLTON'S CANINE RIVAL.—Captain Bun[illegible] of the schooner Leonidas of Huntington owns a large Spitz dog named Jack, which may be set down as the champion dog swimmer. The captain originally found him in the middle of Long Island Sound, several miles from land. One day last week he accidentally left the animal on the East Neck wharf, and Jack, seeing the vessel some distance out in the bay, decided to follow, and consequently jumped off the wharf. As the vessel was under good headway, however, it was supposed that [illegible] he could [illegible] over [illegible] he would return, but nothing more was seen of the dog that night. The next morning, the vessel having meantime arrived at New York, the captain and crew were astonished to find the faithful creature at his usual post on deck, watching over the vessel. He was [illegible] exhausted by his long swim of over forty miles, and could do but little else than lie abed at the dock and recruit his strength for several days.

BRIGHT REPUBLICAN PROSPECTS IN THE WEST.—Col. Robert G. Ingersoll of Illinois said that the Republican prospects in his State were very encouraging, and it was likely that the election would call out a larger number of votes than any election since 1860. The Republican State ticket was very strong, and there was hardly any doubt that Hayes and Wheeler would carry Illinois by a majority of 30,000 or 40,000. The Republicans would also doubtless carry Indiana, not only on account of the position in which Gov. Hendricks had placed himself in his letter of acceptance, but also because the nomination of General Benjamin Harrison for governor had put an end to all the division in the Republican ranks. Iowa and Ohio were preeminently Republican States, and the indications at present were that nearly all the Western States would roll up large majorities for Hayes and Wheeler.

Egyptian Troops Massacred

NEW YORK, Sept 7—A Paris correspondent telegraphs that a fresh disaster has befallen the Egyptian arms in Abyssinia. Fifteen hundred Egyptian troops, under command of [illegible] Pasha, have been massacred. The Abyssinians afterwards proceeded to massacre the garrison and officers, who escaped on board some ships which happened to be in port and arrived safely in Suez. The Egyptian government is contemplating revenge and is sending fresh troops to the scene of action. Cavalry and artillery were also being organized.

Insurgents Increasing.

BELGRADE, Sept 7—Insurgents in Bosnia are increasing in numbers. The Turkish forces are confined to the extreme north and south.

Servian War News.

LONDON, Sept 7—The Times correspondent at Belgrade telegraphs the following: Nothing definite is known about what is passing in the neighborhood of Alexinatz, but there is a strong conviction here that another battle was fought Monday. Some Russians who have just arrived from the front doubt this. They represent the Servian army as reduced to a mere mob. Some of the Russian surgeons are returning home.

A correspondent of the News says that rumors of Servian demoralization and the disintegration of the Morava army are in circulation in consequence of hints dropped by Russians returning from the front. Officials here are dumb concerning the situation around Alexinatz.

The Standard's correspondent says the Russian medical officers who arrived at Alexinatz confirm the worst accounts of Friday's disaster. They say the Servians do not hold any position at Alexinatz, and confirm the report of the Turkish advance on Belgrade via Kragujevatz on the southeast. The Turks cannonaded the whole line from Podgoritza to Spush on Tuesday, creating the impression that a battle was progressing there. This proves to have been a feint with the object of diverting attention of the Montenegrins from Medun, which place they are investing. The Turks desiring to revictual have not succeeded, and they must drive the Montenegrins from cliffs 800 feet high on the other side of the gap in which Medun lies before they can revictual. The result of the fighting in the northwest is still unknown.

Outbreak of a Russian-Turkish War Inevitable.

LONDON, Sept 7—There were a number of disturbing rumors from Berlin yesterday, but they were not confirmed from any other source, and it is believed that they had a stock jobbing origin. The opinion reported from Berlin to the Standard that any outbreak of a Russian Turkish war was unavoidable is not entertained at other capitals. On the contrary, there seems to be a growing confidence that the general peace of Europe will be maintained, however difficult may be the settlement of the details between the Turks and the insurgents. The Porte's refusal to grant an armistice is also unconfirmed, but it is thought not unlikely, and it is believed that the result of such a refusal would be the immediate resort to a formulation of terms of peace between Servia and Montenegro and Turkey, leaving the question of the insurrected provinces for subsequent settlement.

The Great Powers in Favor of an Armistice

The Times' Vienna correspondent, discussing the negotiations between the powers, says they have been and still are one for an armistice. The idea of a conference for the regulation of all pending questions is gaining ground more and more. The idea was first started by France, and seems to find support with its ally, and Russia, the latter, however, not wishing to take the initiative step in the matter. Those who are for taking in hand the peace preliminaries simultaneously with an armistice do not encourage the idea of a conference, which is likely to delay instead of expediting the settlement, on account of the difficulty in making a programme for such a conference. The fixing of that programme would, they think, take more time than an agreement on the general principles of pacification, the details of which could be easily settled by the ambassadors in Constantinople, in concert with the Porte. In face of the many difficulties which pacification may yet present, a reassuring thing is the unanimous wish of all the powers for peace, and therefore their sincere desire to avoid anything which might lead to complications. As a sign of this a communication made by Prince Gortschakoff in Warsaw is making the round of diplomatic circles. It was made in a way which shows it was meant to become known, and is reported as follows: Russia wants as yet rest for a number of years, and then beside the Emperor has decided to have peace, and there is every ground to suppose the other powers are equally desirous to have it. At least, to judge by their assurances, we may reckon on their hearty co-operation with us in this direction.

The New Sultan Invested with the Sword of Osman

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept 7—Abdul Hamid, the new Sultan, was to-day formally invested with the sword of Osman. All the ministers were present.

The Answer of the Porte to the Ambassadors.

LONDON, Sept 7—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states the Porte, replying to the representatives of European ambassadors in favor of peace, said: In the present military situation an armistice was opposed to its interests. The Porte, however, at the same time held out the hope of a speedy proposal of conditions of peace.

TRICKS OF INDIAN SERVANTS.—Domestic servants in India occasionally display an amount of ingenuity in dealing with their employers which would not discredit their European brethren. A Calcutta paper relates that a khitmutgar in the employ of a gentleman in that city, having the other day completed his month and feeling disinclined to remain in the service of his employer, probably because he had a better engagement elsewhere, feigned illness at the end of his month and took leave earlier than usual. The following morning his employer was waited upon by a host of people, men and women, who, claiming relationship with the dead servant, attired themselves as if in mourning, and exhibiting the deepest emotion, announced with tears in their eyes the death from cholera of the unfortunate man, at the same time begging the master to pay up his dues, which were urgently required to defray funeral expenses. The master, sympathizing with their distress, paid up, and even offered to meet the charges attending the demise, when it was ascertained that the man reported dead was in perfect health, in good spirits and employed elsewhere. The ruse was discovered by one of the other servants observing a woman, a relative of the alleged deceased, wearing her ornaments, which, if the death had been a fact, she would, according to native rites and ceremonies, be prohibited from using.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A REMARKABLE FEAT.—The feat of the celebrated English [illegible] was [illegible] by Chas. C. Chapman, a young mechanic of [illegible]. He walked one-fourth of a mile forward, one-fourth of a mile backward, then ran one-fourth of a mile, then hopped every five yards on one foot, then with fifteen eggs placed two feet apart in a row picked them separately in his mouth without touching his knees to the ground, and deposited each in a basket two feet from the starting point, and lastly with fifteen lemons placed in the same relative position as the eggs picked them up separately by hand, going back to the starting point with each one, and accomplished the whole in twelve minutes.—Springfield Republican.

China News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept 7—The Pacific Mail steamer City of Peking arrived this morning from China and Japan. Chinese advices confirm previous reports as to outrages on the French Catholic mission. Several priests and attendants of the mission were murdered and property destroyed to the amount of $60,000. The French minister is taking steps to procure the punishment of the perpetrators, among whom are several officials of high rank. The difficulty of the situation towards England continues unsettled, and grave consequences are feared. The Chinese are making preparations for war. Grain Measure Failed.

The action of the Grangers' convention relative to shipping wheat on farmers' account seems to have failed to produce the desired results. The ship Dryad is the only vessel the Association has yet loaded, and no other ships have been secured. Through this inaction freights, in view of the once more threatened European complications, have advanced from £2½ 6d to £3 without a ship having been secured. Wheat has advanced in Liverpool and is now selling at 46s per quarter, an advance of about 3s. Since the meeting of the convention to secure wheat for their ships the ring have offered $1 55 per cental about two weeks ago, and farmers weakened at once, and the ring had secured from 12,000 to 15,000 tons at this price.

Spring Valley Water Works Mortgaged.

There was filed in the office of the county recorder to-day a first mortgage from the Spring Valley Water Works to D. Ogden Mills, Lloyd Tevis and William F. Babcock, in the sum of $7,000,000, secured on the company's property. The loan was made to enable the company to enlarge and improve the works.

Suspected Foul Play.

Last Thursday, I. S. Stunaff, freight conductor of the California Pacific railroad, came to this city from Petaluma in company with a hotel waiter named Jos. Hines, alias Stafford, alias Henan. Stunaff had in his possession at the time $135 in cash and a check for $200. He also carried a watch and chain and was very well dressed. Hines had very little money. On Monday Hines returned to Petaluma wearing the clothes of Stunaff and carrying his watch and chain and had plenty of money. His return without his traveling companion and the other circumstances mentioned excited suspicion of foul play, and inquiry was made as to what had become of Stunaff. Hines said that Stunaff would return the next day, and gave contradictory statements as to the manner in which he came in possession of the watch, clothing and money. Stunaff has not since been heard of, and Hines was taken into custody.

HOW A CRICKET SAVED A SHIP.—In Southey's History of Brazil he tells how Chabez de Vaca was in a great ship going to South America with 400 men and 30 horses, and after they had crossed the equator the commander discovered that there were only three casks of water left. He gave orders to make for the nearest land, and for three days they sailed for the coast. A poor sick soldier who had left Cadiz with them brought a grillo, or ground cricket, with him, thinking its cheerful voice would amuse him on the long dreary voyage. But to his great disappointment the little insect was perfectly silent the whole way. The fourth morning after they had changed the ship's course the cricket, who knew what she was about, set up her shrillest note. The soldier at once gave warning to the officers in charge of the vessel, and they soon saw high jagged rocks just ahead of them. The watch had been careless, and the great ship in a few moments would have been dashed to pieces on the ledge if this puny creature had not scented the land and told them of their danger. Then they cruised along for five days, and the cricket sang for them every night just as cheerfully as if she had been in far off Spain, till they got to their destined port, the island of Catalina.

The tiny Bible recently issued in England has called forth an interesting discussion as to what are the largest and smallest books published. There is a story in Pliny of a copy of the Iliad on a piece of parchment so small as to be enclosed in a nutshell, but the possibility of such a writing has been doubted. [illegible] Mr Frowde's Bible is the smallest printed book known, bearing the proportion of matter to space, but the smallest actually is said to be a publication of the Religious Tract Society, London, "Small Rain upon the Tender Herb," which is but 1½ inch high. The largest printed work the world has yet seen is the Specifications of English Patents, published in parts at the rate of about ten a day, of which about 40,000 have been issued. Sets of these have been given to several American libraries, but the binding requires a small fortune.

RICHARD WAGNER

THE PECULIARITIES OF THE GREAT COMPOSER.

His gestures are as brusque as the thrusts of a rapier, and his tongue has the volubility of a windmill. The man is highly nervous and passionate. He is a musical Orlando. He is always furious, as though he was going to fight a duel or preach a crusade. He is a perfect volcano. In all he does, in all he says, there is a torrent of lava, of flame and of fire. He is haughty and violent in his sublime extravagance. If ever he became prince of Lippe or of Anhalt he would have all his subjects led to the opera by the police; he would forbid on penalty of death people to play on clarionets, zitheras, pianos or harmonicas of the principality any compositions but his own, and he would introduce by decree into private houses musical coffee grinders, musical beds and sofas, and musical soup tureens and water bottles. If ever he obtains the favor of the king of Prussia he will condemn the Parisians to 30 years of Tannhauser. Despotism and love of power are the basis of this contradictory and warm nature.

He must tyrannize, he must abuse. He beats his players and then afterward with tears in his eyes begs their pardon. One moment he insults his singers, the next flatters them and heaps presents on them. Louis II himself was obliged to have a drawbridge built to his own castle; as soon as the Knight Lohengrin is seen throwing up the dust on the distant road the bridge is raised. He was in a very fair way to eat up all Bavaria out of the King's hand.

This northern German has Eastern tastes and Sardanapalian desires. He has scattered about gold by the shovelful; he has thrown fortunes out of the window.

When he travels he must have his special train, his servants, his waiting maids, his bed hangings of yellow silk worked in gold, his silver and his wine. He hires entire hotels and asks for the bedroom in which princes have slept. At Bayreuth he holds a real court, and at this moment I do not know of any other so brilliant in Germany. He has his equipages, his comedians, his courtiers, his lackeys, and his favorites. From the four corners of the world people come to solicit an audience and to prostrate themselves before the pontiff of the music of the future.

He works in the morning, according to the German motto 'Morgenstunde hat golden stunde.' In the winter an immense fire is lighted, the rose colored candles burning in silver candlesticks emit voluptuous odors; in the summer windows are open, and the room is filled with the sweet scent of the dawn. Before getting to work Wagner takes a bath, and in a cup of black tea, brought to him in a gold cup, pours forth libations to the goddess of music. What care he takes of his body and mind! When the great naturalist, Buffon, wrote the works, the style of which answers so well the majesty of the subject, he was entitled to wear a decent coat, a shirt frill and ruffles of lace. When Wagner begins to work he must needs have the curtains and hangings of his room in harmony with the subject upon which he is engaged; even insists on his dressing gown, trousers, cap and slippers being in harmony with his musical subject. It is not easy to comply with all these requirements. When the object has been attained the maestro exhibits his inspiration by strange antics and small exclamations of joy. Wagner can only work in complete silence. As soon as he is heard to caper and cry no one is allowed to move; at the slightest noise his muse takes immediate flight, and the world loses a chef d'œuvre. When Wagner, owing to the kindness of Meyerbeer and Maurice Schlesinger, lived in Paris, he required neither this ridiculous luxury nor this stupid affectation to inspire him. It was in the year 1840, and at this time Wagner, who set himself up as a mortal enemy of kings, knew what it was to suffer hunger nobly. He did not then present his works to the world as though they were sybilline leaves; his music was not incomprehensible; it had some charming oases. At 11 o'clock Wagner crosses Bayreuth in a carriage and goes to his theater, which is at the other extremity of the town. The rehearsals generally last three hours. Upon the return he breakfasts alone, taking oysters, cold meat and wine. Two hours later he dines with his family. His dinner consists invariably of six entrees. He has an inordinate passion for thrushes, and he manages to get them all the year round. Cheese likewise is a favorite relish of his. In his cellar he has a special compartment which is called "The Cheese Museum." Here Brie ripens gently, Gruyere becomes a deeper gold, Roquefort becomes stronger, and Camembert melts into tenderness. Wagner only drinks from a patriotic motive. Every evening he goes to Ankerman's, the general rendezvous of all the singers and musicians, and drinks his beer. In the midst of the smoke of the pipes which envelops him he resembles a god of Walhalla who has descended incognito into the country of potatoes. At his own house the author of 'Tannhauser' only moistens his divinity with champagne. His little suppers are reputed being very lively. If he finds his friends a little too jovial he has an easy method of damping their spirits. Mysteriously he brings forth a dark lantern and invites his friends to follow him. You go down into the garden, passing through a door half hidden by a curtain of ivy, and you suddenly find yourself in the midst of a sombre forest surrounded by strange, fantastic sounds. At first you are puzzled, then you begin to get anxious, and at length silence roots you to the spot. Wagner suddenly darts his lantern upon a huge block of granite, and in a sepulchral voice says: 'My friends, this is my tomb; think of death!' This announcement acts as a douche. You return to the drawing-room to talk of death, the plurality of worlds, the soul and virtue, but you always finish up with Bismarck and France.

HOW THEY TESTED BEER IN BAVARIA

In all South Germany, but especially in Bavaria, beer is by law and custom reckoned among the necessities of life, and the venders and manufacturers of the same stand under the same control of the police (what you call here the board of health) as the butchers, bakers, grocers, druggists, apothecaries, etc. By unexpected visits and examinations of their articles the police authorities see to it that the public is not overreached by these venders in quantity or quality.

In the innocent times of the Middle Ages there was not much danger of refined adulterations of these articles that there is now. Was the people more conscientious or more ignorant? Who can say? It is enough for us to know that the police had only to look to the quality of the article and the measure it was sold in or under.

In that time stag leather breeches were in common wear among the burgers. The police of Munich used to summon seven of these worthies and set out with them on the 'bier probe' (beer trial). They entered a brew house or the local of a vender of the beverage, and there were nine mass (each of a little more than a quart) of beer put before them, one for each of the jury and for the official, and one was poured over the bench, and down sat the jurors in the wet. When all had finished their beer they rose at a given signal of the official to their feet at once, and when the bench stuck to their leathern breeches and was lifted from the ground the beer was pronounced marketable, because it had the necessary malt sugar; if not, the manufacturer had [illegible] not only a fine, but the beer was confiscated and destroyed.

Those were pious, innocent times. It is otherwise now: the police takes two or three experienced beer tasters (mostly retired brewers) along, and if any beer is pronounced suspicious it is bottled and sealed, and the chemist with his meters, scales, retorts, &c., takes the place of the stag leather breeches of the olden time; but the consequences are about the same to the defaulting brewer.

The Walla Walla Union says: The new flouring mill erected in Colville valley under the direction of A. J. Chapman for the benefit of settlers commenced grinding on the 15th of August. The back of the monopoly is broken and the people rejoice.

NASBY ON THE LETTERS

HIS LITTLE ARRANGEMENT WITH MR. BASCOM.

CONFEDRIT X ROADS,
(WICH IS IN THE STATE UV KENTUCKY,)
August 7th, 1876.

There wuz wunst a doctor wich hed a bark with wood, either physic or puke, accordin ez he stript off the tree, up or down.

Like to this doctor is Tilden and Hendrix. Reed ther letters up and they are hard money physic—read em down and they are soft money vomick.

The day I got back from the St. Louis convenshun I commenst preparin for a stumpin toor for our gallent standard bearers. I borrowed an extra shirt so that I cood hev one, I borrowed a valise to carry it in when I wuzn't speakin, and also to give me standin at sich hotels ez the committee didn't become responsible for my board, and Bascom completed my travelin outfit by contributin a quart bottle uv the newest, to be kerried in the valise, to be voosed when in lokalities where the nessaries uv life wuz hard to come at.

Ez I coodent go out instructin of the people till I knowed wat my candidates believed in, I decided to wait till I got their letters of acceptance. Did that likker stay in the valise? Not any. It wuz all gone the fust day, and I went to Bascom with the empty bottle the next mornin.

"Fill it up, G. W.," sed I. "I cant go till I hev seen them letters."

"When will they come?" askt he.

"To-day or to-morrow," sed I.

"You shood hev kep what you hed till the letters come," he said.

"Bascom," wuz the response, "likker like yoors cannot be kept."

And then, seein trouble ahead, I continyood:

"Promise me that you will keep this bottle filled till them letters come. It will be but a little while, and remember, Bascom, yoo got the $400 that Tilden, the reformer, paid for my vote at St. Louis."

"I promise," he groaned.

"And likewise until I hev read em and understood em, so that I shel not go out and spout false Dimocrisy."

"I promise," he groaned agin.

Day after day passed and no letters came. But promptly every mornin I wuz at Bascom's with that bottle, which he groaningly filled. On the thirtieth day he refoosed pint-blank.

"G. W.," sed I, sternly, "remember yoor promise. I may be called any minit. It wuz the foolish virgins that hed no ile in their lamps. I am no foolish virgin. Fill up the lamp, for I may be called to-nite."

And he filled it becoz he hed promised.

But every mornin he would lift up his voice ez I cum in, and howl, "Grashus hevens! ain't them letters never cumin to releeve me of this incubus?"

At last one mornin the letters cum, in the Louisville papers, and Bascom come over to me happy, ez though a grate weit hed bin lifted off him.

"I'll fill the bottle for the last time," said he gaily, "for lo! here be the letters."

I took the papers and red the letters, and the next mornin was promptly at his bar with the bottle.

"Fill it!" I remarked, calmly.

"Not any," sed he. "Yoo hev the letters."

"George Washington B.," I replied, "yoor promise wuz to keep this bottle filled not only till I hed read the letters, BUT TILL I UNDERSTOOD EM. I hev bin applyin my intellek to em for ten hours, and ef I know from them letters whether I am to talk Hard money or Soft, Immejite Resumpshen or Perpetooal Postponement, I hope never to be Postmaster."

* * *

What did that perjured wretch do? He telegraphed that very day to both Tilden and Hendrix, ez follers:

"Shel Nasby, on the stump, advocate Hard money or Soft? Answer to wunst. Important, to save an innocent Dimocrat from rooin."

The ansers come prompt:

FROM TILDEN.

"Hard money, uv course, but soften it a good deal in the West. Strike boldly, however, for Reform and agin the Corrupshen uv the Republikin party.
TILDEN."

FROM HENDRIX.

"Soft money, uv course, but harden it a good deal in the East. Strike boldly, however, for Reform, and agin the Corrupshen of the Republikin party.
HENDRIX."

And so, hevin my instrukshens, I hed to go. I shel, however, before I speak, get instrukshens from John Morrissey and Fernando Wood ez to the best methods uv bringin about Reform, and uv fightin Corrupshen in governmental matters.

THE HEARING OF BEES.—The question whether bees have the power of hearing is a moot point among naturalists. Sir John Lubbock has tried experiments with his bees in order to elucidate the matter. Thus he has played the violin close to his bees; he has tried a dog whistle, a shrill pipe, a tuning fork and shouting, but no noise seemed to disturb them in the least. Nevertheless a curious occurrence took place a few days since at Windsor. Col. Stewart, commanding officer Second Life Guards, reports that a few days since, when the regiment was returning down the Long Walk from a field day, a swarm of bees, attracted by the music, followed the regiment into the barracks, flying about over the heads of the band. On arriving at the barrack yard the band formed up to play the regiment into barracks; the bees followed their example, forming up also and settling on a branch of a tree over the heads of the bandsmen. They were at once taken prisoners by the corporal of the guard, and are now hived in the barrack yard. The distance over which the bees followed the band was more than a mile. We have heard of spelling bees, but these are musical bees with a vengeance. It is a common practice in the country to collect bees by means of rattling a warming pan with a piece of iron or shaking a stone in a tin kettle, and the idea that bees will follow sounds is as old as Virgil.—London News.

A builder sends to the Prairie Farmer the following summary, which will save much time and trouble in the calculation of areas in building: One thousand shingles laid four inches to the weather will cover one hundred square feet of surface, and five pounds of shingle nails will nail them on. One fifth more siding and flooring is needed than the number of square feet of surface to be covered, because of the lap in the siding and matching of the floor. One thousand laths will cover seventy six yards of surface, and eleven pounds of lath nails will nail them on. Eight bushels of good lime, sixteen bushels of sand and one bushel of hair will make enough mortar to plaster one hundred square yards. A cord of stone, three bushels of lime and a cubic yard of sand will lay one hundred cubic feet of wall. Five courses of brick will lay one foot in hight of a chimney; six bricks in a course will make a flue four inches wide and twelve inches long, and eight bricks in a course will make a flue eight inches wide and sixteen inches long.

A CALIFORNIA FLYING MACHINE.—At the regular meeting of the Academy of Sciences held in San Francisco last week, Mr. W. J. Crooker, C. E., delivered a lecture on Aerial Navigation. He has devised an apparatus which will be practically tested in a fortnight, which he believes will enable a man to fly from San Francisco to New York in a day. He described the apparatus, which will be exhibited at the Mechanics' Fair at San Francisco, as follows, illustrating his remarks by a model:

"The shape of the body of the carriage is a combination and modification of a bird and frigate. Its length [illegible] feet, width of aero plane 40 feet, and width of car 5 or 6 feet. (These are about the dimensions.) There is a series of four wings of 8 feet surface. The guiding is done by a tail, oblique motion is secured by a rudder, and direct motion by propellers for managing the accumulated air in the chambers under the car. There is a series of wheels for getting the start, as it is impossible to rise vertically. The preparatory distance to be run on the ground before taking to the air is estimated at 600 feet."

FRIDAY MORNING SEPTEMBER 8 1876

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S CIRCULAR

Some of the opposition papers are making themselves specially ridiculous over the circular of the Attorney General concerning the election An examination of the circular will prove a sufficient antidote for all the poison which these organs of the White League are endeavoring to infuse into the public mind in this matter For some time past the state of affairs in the Southern States has been such as to leave no room to doubt that the Democratic majorities in those States are greatly swelled, if indeed they are not created by intimidation of the freedmen Whoever would deny that such is the case must be so blinded by prejudice as to be unable to see a fact that is as plain as a pike staff, or else uncandid to a degree beyond conception It is puerile to answer that fraud and intimidation were practised under the carpet-bag governments of the South, that affords no ex[illegible] for the continuation of the same outrageous conduct by the white line Democ[illegible]. It was properly complained of [illegible], and it ought no more to be tolerated The killing of colored people, or their intimidation is a species of electioneering that should be stopped, peaceably [illegible]ble, forcibly if necessary The circular of the Attorney-General simply directs the U. S marshals and deputy marshals to see to it that all who are entitled to exercise the elective franchise are allowed to exercise it without let or hindrance. That is fair and just, and only they who desire to achieve success by unlawful means will object to it. They say there is no occasion for any extraordinary precautions at this time. There is occasion for it The state of calm in the South demonstrates the necessity for it. Coushatta and Vicksburg and Hamburg declare the necessity and the spirit manifested in Baltimore just now, in consequence of the issuance of the circular referred to, shows the [illegible] of it. The colored people of the South, it may be conceded, are not the considerate and self-poised ideal voter of the great republic should be; but if they are ignorant, that is rather why they should be [illegible] than why they should be oppressed. Socially, the "white line" will [illegible] appear any more than the other [illegible] which divide society into classes [illegible]ppear; but in the exercise of the [illegible] of citizenship there must be no line henceforth, though it require [illegible] power of the government to [illegible] out.

A CAUCUS "COMMON LAW"

A person signing himself "Anti-[illegible]" calls into the anti-caucus Dem[illegible] through the columns of the Standard and urges the caucus as the "common law of the party." Well, suppose it [illegible] common law of the Democratic [illegible] put up the most important affairs [illegible] in a little secret conclave, [illegible] common law be enforced now because it has been observed in [illegible]? If it is the common law or [illegible] law of the organization, the [illegible] it is repealed the better for the [illegible]. Of course the politicians, whose depend on their ability to put up the people, want the caucus It [illegible] most convenient instrument in [illegible] hands that could be devised It enables [illegible] clique, by adroit management to exercise all the power of a majority. But it is not a fair way to select [illegible] or determine what legislation [illegible]. Take the legislature just now to convene, for an illustration [illegible] will the caucus system work there? The Democrats have a majority, but a majority of the Democrats is very [illegible] a majority of the legislature If the Democrats go into caucus, according to the "common law of the party," a bare majority of them, being a minority of the [illegible], can make a United States Senator and all the other officers to be elected by the legislature, and can also control the legislation of the country Is that [illegible]? Is that the spirit of our institutions? If so, the Republican members [illegible] as well stay at home and let their [illegible] be unrepresented They can do [illegible], even in the way of ordinary [illegible]. The whole State will be in the hands of a majority of the Democrats, [illegible] of that party and all the Republicans constituting together a large majority of the legislature, being a mere [illegible] and expensive retinue to wait [illegible] the minority. The object of the [illegible] who are manipulating things in the interest of themselves, can be best [illegible]lished, no doubt through the caucus for in that secret conclave they are at home, and know perfectly well how to get their work in." If that is what the legislature is for, let there be a caucus by all means, but if the people are to be served and not cheated—if the conscience of the representatives is not to be placed in the keeping of a few skillful prestidigitators, whose personal aims are the interests of themselves and not of the people—then the caucus should be avoided

OREGON FRUITS

Oregon is already somewhat celebrated for her splendid fruit and if fair specimens of her productions in that line can be placed on exhibition at Philadelphia, we have no doubt that many people of the East will wonder still more at what this State can do in the way of apples, cherries plums pears prunes etc We hope that the efforts now being made to secure a full representation of the fruits of the State at the National Exhibition will be crowned with the greatest success Some gentleman who knows the capacity of the State and its advantages for raising fruit of all kinds and also who possesses a knowledge of the business generally in short some thorough horticulturist as Mr. Henry Miller S Luelling G. W. Walling, or some one of the many others who have made fruit raising in Oregon a business for years should be placed at the head of the matter and be aided by everybody else in the way of contributions both of fruits for exhibition and money for expenses The person selected could then devote his time to the matter and if means can possibly be raised, he should visit the exhibition in charge of the fruits and be present to answer all inquiries and give all information concerning the advantages of the State in this respect If these things can be done we have no fears that Oregon will not take rank among the first States in the Union in the pomological department of the great show and the outlay will return into the pockets of her people in the way of increased revenues from the business of fruit growing, and the benefits arising from the greater attention drawn to our resources in this regard As the time is short in which the preparations can be made let them begin at once and we hope the meeting to be held in this city Saturday will be largely attended and that the subject will be taken hold of with unanimity and in downright earnestness It will pay the people of Oregon to expend a good many hundred dollars in this behalf

On the 2d instant Mr Hendricks made a speech at Shelbyville Indiana in which he divided his time about equally between praising Mr Tilden and demagoging on the finance question Of course his laudations of Tilden were simply a revamping of the puerile nonsense about the foxy old New Yorker's record as a reformer On this subject he neither said anything nor made any of the stale twaddle of the campaign more presentable The burden of his demagoging on the financial question was that working men fail to find employment, and times are hard all of which, he says could be remedied by tinkering the currency It would be unjust to the reputation of Mr Hendricks as an intelligent man to assume that this talk about reviving business and setting all the idle people at work through government machinery is any thing short of arrant quackery There is not a man in all this broad land but who knows unless he is too stupid to know anything that the cause of the present dull times is to be found in the general inflation of currency and business succeeding the war Mr Hendricks dares not attempt to define in intelligible language his plan for restoring prosperity to the country and activity to business through the financial department of the government Any such attempt would at once expose to detection, even by the dullest and dumbest Democratic perception, the shallowness of his pretenses It is a reproach to the nation that a man, capable of such wretched pettifogging should be seriously proposed for Vice President and possibly President of the United States

"As Oregon will carry off medals and diplomas for some of the main staples of the world, we ought to be satisfied,' but being satisfied only will not do One result of the Centennial Exhibition will be to stimulate all States seeking immigration to improve their displays and render them if possible superior to that of Oregon We must make still greater efforts Samples of the wheat just reaped, and of other crops, should be carefully prepared and sent on to Philadelphia at once There is yet time to get them there before the final awards are made. The admirable success attending the attempt to transmit cherries should encourage the transmission of plums, pears and apples. These will attract as much attention as did the cherries Peaches might also be sent, but the distance and difficulty of getting them there in good condition would make it almost hopeless to expect them to compete favorably with the splendid fruit of Delaware and Maryland But if peaches are liable to spoil, grain, flax and wool are not, and samples of these should certainly be sent A special reason for this is that it might be said that the samples of these articles now on exhibition were selected from unusually fine crops and that last year might have been an exceptionally good year for their production If this should be said, or thought, samples of this year's crop equally good as those now there would prove that Oregon could and did produce fine crops of grain and flax and wool every year, and it would go far to substantiate our boast that Oregon farms, when well managed, never fail to yield good returns year after year

Among the Christian subjects of the Porte are Catholics of the Romish church and Catholics of the Greek church The former recognize the Pope as their spiritual head, the latter the Czar Between the two exists an enmity as bitter as that which divides the Roman church from the Protestants The Catholics of the Greek church very largely exceed in numbers the Roman Catholics, of whom there are comparatively speaking but few In the contest now going on between Turkey and her revolted provinces the Christians have had the support of Russia both moral and material, and it is evident that if the provinces succeed in throwing off the Turkish yoke and establishing their independence, their national religion will be that of the Greek Catholics In the establishment of the Greek church the Roman Catholics are unwilling to assist Some of them sent to Rome to inquire what they should do and, it is reported that the Pope advised them to give aid to the Sultan rather than to the insurgents One thousand of them therefore joined the Turkish army immediately and many others have since done the same This will explain what would otherwise seem the strange spectacle of Bulgarians joining the Turkish army to fight against their own countrymen At the same time it adds to the horrors of the war.

We understand one of the members elected to the legislature from this county is preparing a bill for the better assessment of the property of the State Certainly this is much needed The assessment as now done is unequal and unjust in the extreme We have urged this subject upon the attention of members before and it has been intelligently discussed by correspondents of the OREGONIAN and we hope something will be done now to relieve the people of the burdens of imperfect and unequal assessments It is a matter that cannot be disposed of without careful and painstaking investigation Hasty and crude legislation will only make bad worse Let every member study the subject thoroughly to the end that a point overlooked by one may be brought forward by another and so a law be devised which will place the burdens of government on all taxable property with equal weight Let every man bear his just proportion of the expense of governing the State and protecting property

Notwithstanding all that has been said of the baleful influence of Republican administrations in the South causing the oppression of her people and the ruin of her prosperity the South has really more furnaces in blast in proportion to the number of inhabitants than the North has and very few are losing money It is asserted that the only mill in the United States running exclusively on railroad iron which declared a legitimate dividend for 18[illegible] was the one in Chattanooga

It is announced that the Senator who sports the quotation marks is to stump Ohio This is good He can do a great deal more for Hayes in Ohio than he could in Oregon If our John Hiram don't get into a perturbed state of mind and break down before the campaign is over he will make it tropical for the Buckeyes

Joe Goss and Tom Allen two somewhat notorious pugilists, Goss an Englishman and Allen an American, fought a prize fight yesterday in Kentucky, which resulted in favor of Goss on account of Allen striking a foul blow But for this Allen would have won as he had the best of the fight at the time it ended.

BURGLARS AGAIN ON THE WING—THEY ENTER STORES IN SCIO AND AT MARION STATION AND GET AWAY WITH ABOUT $3,000

By letter and telegraph we learn that burglars are again busily plying their vocation, and have succeeded in reaping a golden harvest for their labor and risks incurred and effected an escape without detection This time the town of Scio and Marion station were the scenes of the robberies

The safes of Brown, Johnson & Co Irvine & Morris and D P Mason in Scio were broken open Wednesday night, and $1,500 ex tracted. The thieves made their entrance through windows and doors and riddled every drawer and till The postoffice was also "went for" but the postmaster, having but little coin on hand, did not suffer much No clue to the robbers, but they are supposed to be the same fellows that visited Independence and Forest Grove.

After getting all the money they could, the robbers stole two horses and rode over to Marion Station on the line of railroad, and about 3 o'clock Thursday morning opened a safe in the depot and took out $1 000 in half dollars, and $480 in trade dollars They over looked $2,000 in gold in their hurry. They went north from here took a fresh horse at Wm Morris' place Nine hundred dollars re ward is offered for their apprehension and the recovery of the money They got $1,500 at Scio, making a total of $3,000 they got away with

Our correspondent at Seattle sends the following items under date of Sept 6th

Jackson's new hotel is rapidly approaching completion It will have superior accommo dations

The grand jury were discharged yesterday Their final report was long and contained a severe rebuke to our city fathers county com missioners and police for negligence and care lessness His Honor Judge Lewis compli mented them upon the fearless discharge of their duty and expressed the hope and belief that with a few more grand juries of their stamp crime, drunkenness open violation of the liquor law especially would become less frequent in our city There can be no doubt his honor is in favor of reform and right and that he is no friend to those who disobey the law

Last Saturday evening Judge Jacobs M C from Washington Territory addressed the dear people of Seattle at Yesler's Hall A very fair house greeted the Judge upon his first appearance since his return from Wash ington He told his constituency that in order to do anything for the Territory from which they were sent, delegates should be returned two or three times that it was almost impossible for a delegate to do either justice to himself or his Territory until he became well acquainted well not only members on the floor of the House but with chief clerks and heads of the various departments That of themselves delegates were without power and that their efforts were only successful in that which en listed the sympathies and secured the friend ship of the department and their fellow mem bers The address of Mr Jacobs was straight forward and candid It went far with those who may have found fault with him toward convincing them that he had labored inces santly and solely for the interests of those who had sent him there

LEGIBLE HANDWRITING

The French Prime Minister has issued an order to his official subordinates to be more careful and legible in their hand writing and there are few official regions in the world where the same injunction would not be useful Gentlemen in pub lic life are too apt to write wretched scrawls there being a saying afloat that great men as a rule are bad penmen A saying, by the way which is quite at va riance with the fact In the appendix to David Paul Brown's autobiography is a collection of fac similes of distinguished public men of Pennsylvania mostly lawyers, intended to prove that good penmanship was the rule with such persons The great men who have written bad hands are exceptional Napoleon and Byron produced it is true strange hieroglyphics, especially when they signed their names but Washington, Jefferson the Adamses and per haps all the Presidents, wrote good and some of them very elegant hands the same may be said of Clay, Benton and Calhoun among politicians and Irving, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Bryant Prescott, Thackeray, Bulwer, Tennyson and Scott, among literators The great unknown, "Junius," wrote a remarkably beautiful hand and it is said that the original manuscript of Laurence Sterne's Sentimental Journey," which is preserved in the British Museum is a thing of beauty and a joy forever as a specimen of penmanship It is by no means therefore, true that illegible hand writing is even an eccentricity of genius, much less an indication of greatness in any respect.

There is a curiosity of literature in England called "The Wordless Book," so called be cause after the title page, it contains not a single word. It is a religious allegory de vised, it is said by an evangelical enthusiast and the thought is in the symbolical color of its leaves of which two are black two rose red, two pure white two gold The black symbolizes the unregenerate heart of man; red the blessed redemption the white the purity of the soul washed in the blood of the Lamb the gold the radiant joys of eternal felicity

The Lord Dufferin Hat is the latest style. You can get them at Kohn's

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Permit me through the medium of your columns to thank our citizens who sent the beautiful specimens of plums and cherries to be exhibited in Oregon's department at the Centennial Also thanks to our friends Buchtel and Stolte for photographs of prom inent buildings and scenery in our State These photographs have been mounted and placed in a fine case and are adding much to the attractions at our stand But what I wish more particularly to call the attention of your readers to is our fruit exhibit No one can realize the superiority of our fruit except by seeing it compared with other exhibits These cherries sent from Harrisburg and Milwaukie have induced the inquiry among all classes would it be possible for us to get two or three trees from Oregon that bear such cherries One enterprising nurseryman has a no tice placed beside the bottle containing the cherries Oregon cherry trees for sale at my nursery probably anticipating the demand and intending to order Kansas Iowa and Michigan now take the lead in apples and pears while California to return to the ground she has lost, by the vacillating course of her legislature and commissioners pursued in the start is now making every effort to have her fruit extensively exhibited here this fall Mr Koover their Commissioner showed me letters yesterday from parties who promise to have a car load of their fruit here by the middle of Septem ber Oh, if we could only make such a display of fruit here as was made at our State Fair at Salem last fall but as Oregon will carry off Medals and Diplomas for some of the main staples of the world I suppose we ought to be satisfied, Fruit and vegetables of all kinds for exhibition will be admitted up to the close Yours etc A. [illegible] AT THE EXPOSITION.—[illegible] King writes to the Boston Journal: [illegible] are a perpetual source of [illegible]. Their mild and placid ways, [illegible] engaged in disputes, seem [illegible] to the W[illegible] Caucasian. Their [illegible] and their picturesque costumes [illegible] so common that even the [illegible] country do not long stare at [illegible]. But their manners of thought are ever [illegible] of delight for our people who [illegible] with them. Their [illegible] of our [illegible] are so totally different from our [illegible] so much less favorable, that we [illegible] from time to time to be shocked. [illegible] their views of things provoke [illegible]. The Cypriote Greek who brought [illegible] one evening at the Turkish cafe [illegible], when I asked him how he liked [illegible] 'Ha! Merika good place to [illegible] money; not place-a live' Then [illegible] a long breath, he added 'Breathe live!' by which curious remark I suppose he meant to express the idea that [illegible] was not life, and that the only life worth having was the sensuous [illegible] one of his own delicious climate [illegible] friend related to me a day or two since his experience in studying the character of a very well-bred Turk, who lives in the [illegible] hotel with him The Turk, who is [illegible] to speak a little English, is an affable, round faced, well-dressed gentleman, who does not seem capable of harming a fly. But the other day my friend seeing the [illegible] in the morning paper of the terrible [illegible] in Bulgaria, read them aloud to the Turk, expecting from him some deprecatory [illegible]. None came, the Turk smiled sweetly as he heard the thrilling accounts of children [illegible] upon bayonets, women strangled and [illegible], and rubbing his hands, he said 'Much [illegible] kill more, stop war more soon' Then [illegible] the action to the word, he went through [illegible] of tossing a child on a bayonet [illegible] burst into a laughter, saying 'Much [illegible] that make them much afraid" After which he went on tranquilly eating his breakfast as if his sentiments were quite natural and justifiable."

HOW JOHN BUNYAN GOT OUT OF PRISON.—Bunyan was in his day quite a controversial writer, and was very severe upon the Quakers until he learned that through their intercession he obtained his release from prison It is a somewhat noteworthy fact now, well authenticated, Charles II liberated Quakers and Puritans from confinement through the per[illegible] of the Quakers, among whom was Richard Carver who was mate of the fishing vessel which conveyed the King of France after the famous battle of Worcester 1651. This honest Quaker sailor, after 20 years had rolled away, appealed to the king in person in behalf of those who were in prison When the fugitive king fled for his life this sailor conveyed him on shore The vessel was bound for Poole, coal laden with two passengers who passed for merchants running away from their creditors The fugitive king and Lord Wilmot were landed at Fecamp in Normandy, upon the back of a Quaker and the vessel recrossed the channel to Poole When the honest sailor appeared before his majesty the king expressed his astonishment that he had not previously sought some reward The sailor replied that he had done his duty, and God had rewarded him with peace of mind "And, now, sire, I ask nothing for myself but that your majesty will do the same for my friends that I did for you set the poor pious sufferers at liberty that you may always have that peace and satisfaction that always follows good actions' King Charles thereupon pardoned 471 Quakers and many Independents and Baptists—among them John Bunyan —Nashville Christian Advocate

An Eastern newspaper says We took a new reporter on trial yesterday He went out to hunt for items and after being away all day returned with the following, which he said was the best he could do 'Yesterday we saw a sight which froze our blood with horror A cabman driving down Clark street at a rapid pace was very near running over a nurse and two children There would have been one of the most heartrending catastrophes ever recorded had not the nurse with wonderful forethought, left the children at home before she went out and providentially stepped into a chemist's shop just before the cab passed Then, too the cabman just before reaching the crossing thought of something he had forgotten and turning about drove in the opposite direction Had it not been for this wonderful occurrence of favorable circumstances a doting father a loving mother and affectionate brothers and sisters would have been plunged into the deepest woe and most unutterable funeral expense' The new reporter will be retained"

Financial matters are moving on in the usual channels without any specially disturbing element Whatever contingencies are likely to arise are being amply provided for and though a forced large movement of the surplus agricultural products of the country might and almost inevitably would bring about a closer monetary situation than has existed for some time there are no probabilities of a more general pressure than was felt last year nor so much as was experienced in the fall of 1874

At this time the loan and discount market is unusually quiet and borrowers hold the controlling power to quite as great an extent as could be expected; when the preparations to meet the anticipated demands of the wheat trade it would seem would cause lenders to draw the strings very tightly Outside enterprises, and even some speculative movements are being favored by material aid from local resources but not to such an extent as to interfere with the supply necessary to support legitimate trade Rates are not at all inclined to appreciate and applicants for favors find their wants met on terms fully as moderate as have ordinarily been obtained in Oregon. There is some complaint however, which has its origin with retail dealers principally in the interior The time has come for them to settle with the wholesale houses and their customers have not been prompt with them and thus throughout the community of dealers there is friction The general disposition however, is one of forbearance with the lapse of time commensurate with the backwardness of the season we have no doubt business will be straightened out and assume its wonted channel

Selling Wheat—The Supply and Demand.

Many persons not familiar with the condition of the country and the state of the work of harvesting are disposed to criticise the action of the farmers in withholding their grain from the market, and say the prosperity of the State and the activity in business is being retarded by it. But we think it is too soon to set up this complaint, let such persons wait until the crops are all harvested and threshed, and hauled and stored within reach of the boats or cars Then we have no doubt there will be plenty of wheat for sale to load the ships as fast as they arrive Two years ago, it will be remembered, there was heard the same complaint that the farmers were holding back their wheat for higher prices weeks before they were ready to sell for any price. But when they were ready though prices had not advanced, the wheat came forward very freely and shippers secured all they desired So it will probably be this season, and there never need be much fear but that Oregon farmers will be willing to accept a fair market price for their products, but they will always take the trouble to investigate and inquire into the contingencies and probabilities that affect the market They are right in this course and any other business man would do the same But, says a merchant farmer A ought to sell his wheat and put himself into a situation to pay his store bills at the retailers who in turn would be able to settle with the jobbing and wholesale houses and thus the money now idle because the wheat is not sold be brought into general circulation and infuse life and activity into the various departments of trade. That is a personal matter between the debtor and creditor, and it would be out of place for us to say what either would do, but it must be remembered that if only those sell who are obliged to do so, the proportion of the crop changing hands would be comparatively small, as the great bulk of the surplus wheat of the State is raised by the large farmers who do not owe "store bills" that they have not means outside of their present crop to meet. So the talk of the necessity of money to pay debts being a motive power to bring the wheat crop to market is idle The producer must be convinced that the shippers offers are a fair value considering the price in Liverpool or other port of demand, the rates of freight and other expenses of marketing It must also appear to the Oregon farmer that no advance is probable, as when he is not in urgent need of money he would rather take the chances of getting interest by a rise in wheat than by selling at present rates and making the interest by lending or using the proceeds

No one, however, well posted in regard to the wheat trade and production of the world, can tell how the markets will be in six months, because events now entirely unforeseen and unthought of may occur to change the whole drift of the business and send prices up to a higher figure than they have touched for years, or something might transpire to depress them still lower Hence the present circumstances are the only safe guides, and the probable supply and demand as affected by them the basis upon which predictions of the future can be made Taking these into consideration, the opinions of men whose knowledge of the business is generally found to be as nearly correct, are about settled that the rule throughout the season upon which we have now entered will be low prices, and that those who sell early will do quite as well as those who hold to a later period We do not judge for the producer in these matters, but lay facts before them as they come to us.

An eminent English statistician has been making some estimates of the probable crops and demands of the principal wheat growing countries of Europe. He estimates the wheat crop of 1876 of the British Isles at 12,000 000 quarters. The wheat of this year's crop will be of fine quality The annual consumption of wheat in the United Kingdom is placed at 22,500 000 quarters to 23,000 000 quarters, so that there will be required of foreign wheat to supplement the home grown about 10,500 000 to 11,000 000 quarters. France, the indications are, will require, to supplement her home crop of 1876 some 12,000,000 to 20 000 000 bushels of foreign wheat Belgium and Holland have usually imported about 12,000 000 bushels per annum. These countries will require to draw upon the granaries of the world in 1876-7 September 1st to August 31st 110 000 000 to 120 000 000 bushels of wheat. South eastern Europe and America will both have an ample supply of wheat with which to meet any demand European countries may make upon them The wheat crop this year in America is probably somewhat under an average taking the winter and spring wheat together Southern Russia will have an abundant wheat crop.
